

Welcome from the Air Permits Division Director

(Transcript from the Air Permits 101 online training video)

Hi, I'm Mike Wilson, director of the Air Permits Division, here at the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality. I'm proud to have the opportunity today to welcome you to Air Permitting 101.

This training is intended for new air permitting staff, new regional staff, new legal staff, and really anyone that wants to learn more about the Air Permits Division and what we do here.

This training will give you a better understanding of how we issue New Source Review and Title V permits. It's also intended to help you have a better understanding of how we interact with other parts of this agency and how important that interaction is to our daily business.

For those of you that are new to the Air Permits Division, this is the first in a series of core training that should serve as a basic building block to help provide you a strong career here within the Air Permits Division.

Once again, on behalf of the Air Permits Division and the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality, I welcome you and I thank you for taking time to watch these videos.
