New Executive Director at Helm of the TNRCC

Jeff Saitas promises to continue efforts to simplify the regulatory process, improve information management, and build on a productive working relationship with the Texas Legislature. "Having effective government that protects the environment at the lowest possible cost...is the right direction to go," Saitas says.

EPA Region 6 Administrator Understands State Perspective

Gregg Cooke, EPA's new regional administrator in Dallas, oversees federal environmental programs in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Oklahoma. A former Texas assistant attorney general, Cooke says "I believe that my state experience qualifies me to help ease the tension that commonly exists between federal and state officials."

Get Smart: Bright Ideas for Saving Water

WaterSmart '98, a public awareness campaign for water conservation sponsored by the TNRCC and the Texas Water Development Board, has reached a broad spectrum of Texans with the message that every citizen, no matter what age, has a personal responsibility to use water wisely.

Corpus' Pipe Dream Becomes Reality

The Mary Rhodes Memorial Pipeline is massive enough to transport a small lake (about 15 billion gallons) each year 101 miles all the way from Lake Texana to Corpus Christi. The impressive engineering feat will help meet the coastal city's growing water demands into the new millennium.
